

Time To Say Good-Bye

The love of my life just left, she took both the kids My faithful truck won't even start and my life is on the skids Flat broke as I sit with my dog, he's old and ready to die
My mother passed away last year and I never said good-bye Things are getting kinda heavy, going from bad to worst Rain is falling all around, where will the roof leak first
As I gather pots and buckets, I think of times in the past and pat the head of a dying friend, won't nothing ever last Doves haunting call seems to tear at my soul
Freight train crys in the fading light changing as it rolls Thunder and lightning in the sky, now it's raining hard Drops from the ceiling ping and pang and my dog heads for the yard So now I'm sitting all alone just adding up the toll Seems to me from where I am I don't have no control My horse broke his leg last week, my best friend put him down Climbed into his loaded Caddy and headed out of town
